Parish Administration.

In days gone by, when Parishes had more than one Priest and curates tended to direct administrative activity, not many local problems existed. Nowadays, when decision-making, financial activity and other activities need modern verification, should ONE PRIEST in a parish be expected to cope with all areas of administration. As Priests are expected to give their time to religious activity, in modern times when other aspects of life are very demanding, should Priests be expected to supervise all other Parish activities? The associated areas of religious activity, Parish administration / decision-making, financial organization and many other demanding obligations are generally too much pressure for Clergy, who have passed the age of normal retirement. While religious activity might still be a possible way of life for such clergy, Parish administration is too demanding. Parish Committees are very much a necessity. Please consider your contribution to it's presence in our Parish.
